The Pearson Fellowship	Varies	Pearson Fellows attend private seminars with policy leaders and practitioners in the policy fields of conflict and development, as well as with Pearson faculty members and relevant academics outside of the University of Chicago. Established in 2015, The Pearson Institute for the Study and Resolution of Global Conflicts promotes discussion, understanding, and resolution of global conflicts through research, education and engagement with the global policy community.	When you apply to the MPP program at Harris, there is an optional essay question about global conflict. By answering this question, you will be considered for the Fellowship.
Wendt Fellowship	up to $42,500	Wendt Fellowships are awarded to students who demonstrate exceptional leadership skills, a strong academic record, and interest in public service.	Automatically Considered
King Harris Fellowship	up to $22,000 and an opportunity to network with Mr. Harris.	King Harris Fellows are selected for their passion to pursue public policy and their strong academic records.
Irving B. Harris Fellowship	may cover up to the full cost of tuition and a living stipend	Irving B. Harris's true passion was improving the lives of children through innovative solutions to wide-ranging social problems. He believed that societal tensions could be alleviated through effective social policies and wanted to see the country's brightest young leaders apply their skills to address these challenges. Thus, Harris supported the creation of the School of Public Policy at the University of Chicago and provided significant financial support for students. In his honor, the top admitted students, based on merit and strength of application, are awarded an Irving B. Harris Fellowship	Preference is given to applicants who demonstrate a strong interest/background in child and family policy areas. Recipients are expected to engage in activities that support Harris and its community.
