

Name	Award	Details	How to Apply
Dean's Diversity Fellowships	ranging from one-half tuition to full tuition along with a $6,000 per year assistantship	to students who exemplify a strong commitment to the improvement of race-related issues in the United States.
Heinz Fellowships	ranging from one-half tuition and a $6,000 research assistantship	to students committed to working in careers focused on serving the public interest.
Heinz Fellowship in Economic Development	ranging from one-half tuition to full tuition and $1,000 in conference or workshop support for a student's second year at Heinz College.	To be eligible, you must be a U.S. citizen, and have demonstrated a strong commitment to economic development either in your previous academic work or during your professional career, and choose "Regional Economic Development" as your area of interest within the application for admission	encourage you to use the standard essay, optional essay, or optional video essay to express your interest in the fellowship.
Tribal Affairs Fellowship	ranging from one-half tuition to full tuition and a $6,000 per year research assistantship	to students committed to promoting the advancement of the American Indian population and tribal affairs.
Women in Intelligent Transportation Fellowship	full tuition and a $6,000 annual stipend for their work as an intern with Heinz College's Traffic21 Institute	The fellowship program was established as part of Heinz College's commitment to promoting diversity in the field of Intelligent Transportation Systems. Preference will be given to (i) students who have selected "Transportation" as their area of interest within the application for admission, (ii) students who have demonstrated interest and commitment to the promotion of women in smart transportation, (iii) students with a major/minor in gender studies/theory, (iv) graduates of HBCU's and HSI's, (v) students who are first in their family to attend graduate school, and/or (vi) students for whom English is their second language.
David Lingren Fellowship for Social Innovation	full tuition and work study award ($5,000 per academic year) for this work.	work with Leah Lizarondo, Entrepreneur in Residence at the Block Center for Technology and Society. The Lingren Fellow's work with the Block Center would be centered on taking ideas that respond to societal needs and frame it within a sustainable business structure
The Neighborhood Allies Fellowship	full tuition and paid part time fellowship	The Neighborhood Allies Fellowship is awarded to outstanding students enrolling in the MSPPM degree program who have demonstrated an interest and commitment to community development in underserved communities. See the Neighborhood Allies website for more information on the organization's mission and work within the Pittsburgh community.	