

Name	Award	Details	How to Apply
Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute (CHCI) Fellowship	$7500+	Driven by our social justice values and our desire to increase diversity in our program and in the public service field, UCLA Luskin Public Policy has established a partnership with CHCI. The partnership will provide a minimum fellowship of $7,500 to CHCI alumni who are admitted to our Master of Public Policy program. The scholarship is renewable in the second year of study.
Research Fellowships for Environmental Justice &amp; Policy Innovation (Luskin Center for Innovation)	he fellowship value is approximately $6,500 for two quarters, but sometimes more, depending on exact employment placement and project length. If funding permits, LCI may also cover tuition reimbursement	The Research Fellowship for Environmental Policy Innovation is offered to prospective students with a demonstrated interest in environmental planning and policy analysis. The Research Fellowship for Environmental Justice is offered to prospective students motivated to address environmental racism and other inequities. Encouraged to apply are students of color, first-generation students, or others interested in conducting research or applied work in environmental sustainability, including but not limited to the field of environmental justice and equity.	Prospective students can apply as part of the departments' standard degree application. Make sure to check the box indicating your interest in receiving a fellowship from the Luskin Center for Innovation.
ITS Fellowship	Varies	The Luskin School houses a branch of the University of California Institute of Transportation Studies, which offers renewable one-year graduate fellowships, research assistantships where students work with faculty on transportation policy research, and financial aid to students attending transportation conferences. Fellowship recipients must be U.S. citizens or permanent residents, must take or waive out of at least four approved transportation policy and planning courses during their studies, and must complete their Applied Policy Project on a transportation-related topic	To apply for this fellowship please include a brief statement (half-page double-spaced, 100 words) describing your interest in the transportation policy and planning concentration or any background that you may have in this area.
Need Based Award	$1,000 to $10,000.	The Financial Aid award is determined by the amount of unmet need as assessed by the FAFSA and the UCLA Financial Aid office	Students submit a brief statement with an online application form (@500 words or less) qualifying their "unmet" financial need, particularly if there are personal circumstances that are not easily assessed by the FAFSA.
David Bohnett Fellowship Program	$35,000.00	The fellowships are full-time during the summer and part-time during the 9-month academic year. The David Bohnett Fellowship Program was established as a hands-on working experience in the City of Los Angeles Mayor's Office for exceptionally promising public policy, social welfare, and urban planning students. The Bohnett Fellowship Program will offer students first-hand experience in the highest levels of city government and will provide senior executives in the Mayor's office with an outstanding cohort of policy interns
Luskin Leadership Fellowship at the Office of Child Protection, Los Angeles County	$30,000.00	CLA Luskin Leadership Fellowship is a high-level apprenticeship program for exceptional public policy, social welfare, and urban planning graduate students that serve within selected government agencies and nonprofit and civic organizations to work on research, policy, advocacy and applied projects tailored to the students' tracks of study and consistent with the mission and goals of the organization	